

Many partners do not recognize that they are engaging in escalating behaviour that increases their risk for violence

Many partners who are abusive do not recognize that they are engaging in escalating behaviour that increases their risk for violence. Addressing Brian's risk to commit violence is one way to reduce overall risk.

A high risk study in London, Ontario showed that over 80% of men who were charged for domestic violence were shocked to discover they were being flagged as high risk by police. (The study done by Dr. Katreena Scott with Changing Ways and the London Police Services)

If you have a relationship with Brian... if he is your friend, a brother or a neighbour that you care about, you might be the best person to talk with him about what you see happening. We always want to hold Brian accountable for his behaviour AND it is important to acknowledge that most men can change their behaviour. Only a small percentage of people are unreachable.